Style comes from within for interior designer Reid Pasternak who has quietly provided many high profile clients throughout the nation with design services for over two decades.

Reid's philosophy is that design and style should reflect one's personality. In each project he tackles, he remains dedicated to the client's own identity and portrays this through the décor of their personal space. His viewpoint has produced a large and loyal following of sports superstars, celebrities and business moguls.

His residential and commercial projects are as distinctive as they are unique. Reid possesses an ability to interpret the latest trends to suit each of his clients.

Profession: Reid is an interior designer and owner of Pasternak Designs.

Most Stylish Places: The Mall at Millenia for one-stop shopping, Thornton Park's sexy restaurants and Windermere's growing neighborhoods.

Stylish Fashion Finds: Reid always finds what he needs at Saks Fifth Avenue, but Neiman Marcus offers a new and alternative option for him.

Style at Home: His home reflects his life travels and its style comes from practicing the philosophy of less is more. "Function first and form second," he said.

Most Stylish Events: Headdress Ball, Silver Spurs Rodeo, Orlando Museum of Art's Acquisition Trust Gala, The Fringe Festival and anything in support of Variety Club.

Personal Style: Reid describes his personal style as casual and comfortable opulence. "Everyone I have ever met has somehow influenced my style including my Jack Russell Terrier, Coco," he said.

Stylish Evening: An intimate gathering with close friends, great food and libations.
